We're looking for a PRODUCT MANAGER passionate about education and social change in Africa!

Ubongo is a social enterprise that seeks to transform learning for the 440 million kids in Africa through interactive edutainment, delivered via accessible technologies. We produce Ubongo Kids and Akili and Me, interactive edu-cartoons loved by over 6 million families in Africa.

To complement each of the shows, we also have a suite of digital products, from apps and eBooks to and IVR service.

We're looking for a full time product manager for Ubongo's mobile apps, mobile services, and other upcoming mobile and digital products.

Responsibilities:

Manage the full product life cycle: planning, design, development, user testing, go-to-market, marketing, user engagement and expansion. Work with CEO to define product roadmap, and manage work across teams to execute.

You are the user's advocate and representative, and ensure that all of our digital product development puts our users' needs first!

You will coordinate between teams within Ubongo (education, writing, music, animation) to maintain content pipeline for mobile and digital. You will also manage quality assurance to maintain top quality of product and content.

Coordinate and maintain constant communication between Ubongo and our mobile and digital partners around the world, including Kenya and Thailand.

Work with in-house research team to ensure constant user testing of prototypes and products (both internal and external). Create and manage systems for rapid analysis and response to user testing results.

Analyze data from system usage, user testing, marketing and other sources for business intelligence and educational impact, and respond with actions and informed decisions.
